WASHINGTON LETTER

(Special Correspondence)

Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador, and Mr. Takahira, the Japanese minister, have agreed to a treaty of peace. Under the rules of diplomacy it would be a gross breach of etiquette for either to recognize the other while their countries are at war but they have continually met at the state department. These encounters became embarrassing and to put an end to them it has been agreed that whenever Mr. Takahira has any business at the state department he will call in the morning, while Count Cassini will visit Secretary Hay only in the afternoon. The afternoon visits were then to Count Cassini because he was the ambassador while Mr. Takahira was a minister.

Ministers at the state department early in the war they reacted to face in the diplomatic anteroom, where a number of ministers and attaches were assembled. Mr. Takahira bowed before he thought. Count Cassini inclined his head very slightly and rigidly left the room. Mr. Takahira afterward explained that he bowed to the count as dean of the diplomatic corps and not as Russian ambassador. After that the two diplomats agreed not to see each other when they met.

Capitol Alterations.

Considerable attention was attracted in Washington some days ago by a statement made by William S. Eames of St. Louis, president of the American Institute of Architects, bearing on the question of capitol alterations. Mr. Eames said that "whatever plans the joint commission, which is now considering the enlargement of the capitol, recommends to congress should be carried out in staff construction in order that it may be seen just how it would look before the actual work on the permanent structure is undertaken.

If congress would appropriate $100,000 such a temporary enlargement of the capitol might be made in all its details and with exact reproduction of the color effect by contrast with the older stones, which, such an enlargement would actually produce. The assurance that this would give of the success of the plan might prove to be eventually worth millions of dollars.

Chevy Chase Club Raid.

No little amusement was caused in official and social circles of Washington by the recent seizure of liquors made by Maryland authorities at the Chevy Chase club. This club is located in Montgomery county, Md., just outside the District of Columbia, and numbers among its members many high government officials, members of the supreme court and diplomats.

The club is a place of the supreme court of the United States, while Justice McKenna is often seen following interesting matches. Several of Washington's best known clergymen are among the golfers who frequent the club.

Use For Old Newspapers.

Among the recent visitors at Washington was Leopold Haasmann, United States vice consul at Batavia, Java. Mr. Haasmann has been on a trip around the world. He is studying the question of what Americans do with their old newspapers. He says that the English newspapers and people save their old papers and send them to their colonies to be used as wrapping paper. He thinks that such a scheme would be useful in this country, and he will suggest the plan to American newspapers, which have thousands of copies left over after they get through making up their circulation statements.

Rabbit's Foot For President.

Through Secretary Loeb President Roosevelt has acknowledged the receipt of a finely mounted rabbit's foot sent him by John W. Fraser, register of the city bureau of surveys of Philadelphia. Mr. Fraser vouches for the fact that the rabbit was shot by a negro preacher on the seventh day of the seventh week of the year under the full moon in a graveyard at midnight.

Indian Relics.

Mr. James Mooney of the bureau of ethnology has returned after an absence of nearly a year in the west among the Kiowa and Cheyenne tribes of southwest Oklahoma, the object of his trip being to obtain a full history of the shields and topees used by these Indians. He brought back to place in the National museum a collection which is probably the only one of its kind in the world.

The shields of the Kiowa warriors are symbolic and are supposed to possess a sacred power in preserving the wearer from harm in battle. The designs are drawn not by the bearer, but by a shield maker, who gathers the ideas of the symbols from the dreams of one of the head men of the tribes. There are 120 of these models, most of them decorated with gay feathers and painted gaudily with yellow and red.

Presents For the President.

Several exhibitors at St. Louis have expressed a desire to the committee in charge of the distribution and return of the exhibits in the Philippine reservation to the islands that their displays, which have been greatly admired by world's fair visitors, be presented to President Roosevelt. Mrs. Roosevelt, Miss Alice Roosevelt and Secretary of War Taft.

The presents to President Roosevelt will include photographs of the islands, a bamboo basket and a bamboo hat, a handsome stationery case of fine native woods and a handmade certain of pineapple fiber.

The gift to Mrs. Roosevelt consists of a set of handsome embroidered handkerchiefs, while some of the hand-some and rarest of the displays in the liberal arts department exhibited by Filipino women will be presented to Miss Alice Roosevelt.

CARL SCHOFIELD.

HUMOR OF THE HOUR

Another Good Man Gone.

"Sir," he began as he entered the county clerk's office almost as soon as the door was opened for business the other morning, "I am in love with a person of the opposite sex."

"Meaning a woman," remarked the clerk as he looked up.

"Meaning a woman, sir, and one of the nicest women on the face of this terrestrial globe. I not only love her, but I have asked her to be mine."

"And you want a license to get married, of course? What name, please?"

"Sir, my name is Schuyler Jenkins White, but I don't desire a license. I have called here to say to you that any law demanding a marriage license is a relic of the dark ages."

"You wish to publish to the world at large my intention of marrying Amanda Jane Blinkerhorn my wife is nothing short of an act of barbarism, and I don't propose to put up with it, sir—not for a moment, sir. Even if my feelings cannot be respected, hers must be."

"I'm sorry," replied the clerk, as he thought of how much hard coal his fee would purchase.

"But that makes no difference to me," continued Mr. White, as he got more voice on him. "I find that I cannot marry in Detroit without submitting to indignity and insult. Therefore—"

"You won't marry at all?"

"But I will, sir. I am now about to proceed to the home of my fiancée and start with her for Buffalo. Upon reaching that city, where no license is required, we will be made one. Not only that, but I shall invest $600 in that town and become a resident. Detroit not only loses that money, but a thrifty, law abiding citizen and a widow who can make muffs to melt in your mouth. That's it, sir, that's it, and now you and your old barbaric law can go to Texas, and I will proceed to office the name of Michigan from my memory and forget that I ever dwelt within her confines and had my neck under the heel of the despot."

—Detroit Free Press.

A Sure Thing.

"I know how the Japanese could be made to retreat."

"How?"

"Let the czar go to the front and tell them the bright things his baby says."

When Daddy Was a Boy.

I'm very, very naughty, and I play most awful tricks!

My daddy says he wasn't half as bad when he was six.

He never ran away from school nor broke his pretty toy—

They simply couldn't do such things when daddy was a boy.

It's "Baby, don't do such naughty, naughty things as that! Baby, let doggie be! Don't tease the pussy cat!"

It's "Baby, don't annoy! Your daddy never did such things when daddy was a boy!"

They never put a scuttle full of coals on kitty's tail.

Or tickled dogs to empty cans to hear them yelp and wall.

Or stood the cat in walnut shells to see her jump for joy.

Or cripped frogs, or anything, when daddy was a boy!

Then what's the use of pussy cats or coals or cans or dogs.

Or kittens or of walnut shells, or croaking, thrilling frogs?

And why should not my Sunday clothes be freshened up with paint?

But daddy never did such things, for daddy was a saint!

But if they never lost themselves, nor greased their hair with glue.

Nor speckled sister's frock with ink, nor chopped themselves in two.

Nor stirred the beehives up with sticks, nor howled for very joy.

I wonder what on earth they did when daddy was a boy!

I s'pose I'm very wicked, not fit on earth to stay.

In fact, if I must be so good, I'd rather fly away.

If that daddy tells me to be the truth without alloy.

I guess they didn't have much fun when daddy was a boy.

FLIES IN MANCHURIA.

They Swarm Everywhere and Are an Intolerable Plague.

Manchuria is the land of flies. They ravage it like an Egyptian plague. If you have not experienced it, it is almost impossible to realize how loathsome some are these black swarms. Early in the morning they descend from the ceiling and crawl over your face and hands, into your ears and nostrils. Friendly meetings are held in your hair, and fights take place in the corners of your eyes. There is not a glass or a cup in which they are not to be found drowned in masses. They buzz out of sugar bowls and dishes, they swim in the sauce of every dish we eat. They scurry in great numbers over the tablecloths; they cover bread and meat as a solid body which the eye cannot penetrate. They move everything about, they turn walls, furniture, bed, the paper on which I write this letter, the pen in my hand and the ink I am using. Everywhere these small black things crawl and buzz as in a repulsive delirious vision. But the evening is the worst time of all. Satisfied and drowsy, they settle themselves where it best suits them, and they are not to be got rid of. So one crushes them, only to be sickened still by the black, yellow and red spots which they leave on one's skin, on one's tablecloths, tables, linen, paper—everything. Truly the flies own Manchuria, increasing by millions in its dust and mud, an intolerable plague.—Cor. London Graphic.

Just as With Her Father.

"Your daughter's music is improving," said the professor, "but when she runs the scales I have to watch her pretty closely."

"Just like her father," said Mrs. Nuttich. "He made his money in the grocery business."—Philadelphia Ledger.

WE'LL ALL GO

It has been rumored that a World's Fair will be held in San Francisco in 1913 to commemorate the 40th anniversary of the discovery of the Pacific Ocean by Balboa.

It is expected that the Panama Canal will be completed by that time and will furnish another good reason for the exhibition.

Government aid is to be asked for and work will begin soon.

LEASED THE FAIR ESTATE

Virginia Vanderbilt and Theresa Alice Oelrichs, daughters of the late James G. Fair, have leased a portion of their property in Sonoma county to I. Sartori and Victor Sartori. The property comprises 3,689.79 acres at Lakeville and the rental is fixed at $32,285.70, payable in equal semi-annual instalments in advance. The ranch is dairy property.

The lessors are not to be called upon to make any improvements for five years, the term of the lease, and the right is retained to have a boat and railway landing on the place.

The lessors have also the privilege of granting railway rights through the land or to maintain a railroad themselves. The lease can be terminated after third year if the lessors sell the land, by giving one year's notice in advance to the lessees. Mr. Sartori is a former local capitalist. —Republican

TOURING THE VALLEY

A jolly crowd of San Francisco people are enjoying a stay at Agua Caliente Springs Hotel.

A company composed of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Jones, the Misses Edna and Hazel Jones, Mrs. Will Jason, Mrs. Wm. Hinkle, made a tour of the valley the other day on a hand car. They pronounce it the best observation car they ever rode in.

A GRAND AFFAIR

As usual, the annual Y. M. I. Ball in Union Hall last Wednesday evening was a happy and profitable event. The hall was tastefully decorated for the occasion. A large gathering attended and enjoyed tripping the light fantastic until the wee sma' hours of yesterday morning. The music was excellent and the supper, served by mine host Gotenberg, was all that heart could wish.

The committee having the event in charge are to be congratulated on their good work.

Orlando Soldate

Killed by the Accidental Discharge of his Shotgun

Last Monday evening while on his return from a hunting trip in Marin county, and when within 12 miles of Petaluma, Orlando Soldate was almost instantly killed by the accidental discharge of his gun.

He had just shot a small rabbit, and returning to the rig, had placed the gun in the buggy and then got in himself. He had no more than seated himself than from some inexplicable cause, the automatic pump gun was discharged, the shot entering his neck, killing him almost instantly.

In the buggy at the time was a friend, Fred Elmer, who drove hurriedly on, but the unfortunate man was dead long before reaching town.

His devoted wife, who was formerly Miss Lena Sturve of Napa, and to whom he had been married but three years, is prostrated over the sad occurrence.

Mr. Soldate was but thirty years of age and very popular in Napa and Petaluma. Years ago he was a resident of Sonoma where he still has many friends who will be saddened by hearing of the distressful accident that carried off a young man in the prime of life.

The heartfelt sympathy of all goes out to the sorrow-stricken wife and family.

The funeral took place from his late residence in Petaluma, Wednesday afternoon, the Eagles, of which deceased was a highly respected member, conducted the services.

A PHYSICIAN HEALED.

Dr. Geo. Ewing, a practicing physician of Smith's Grove, Ky., for over thirty years, writes his personal experience with Foley's Kidney Cure: "For years I had been greatly bothered with kidney and bladder trouble and catarrh of the prostate gland. I used everything known to the profession without relief, until I commenced using Foley's Kidney Cure. After taking three bottles I was entirely relieved and cured. I prescribe it now daily in my practice and heartily recommend its use to all physicians for such troubles. I have prescribed it in hundreds of cases with perfect success." Sold by L. S. Simmons, druggist.

BOUND TO SUPERIOR COURT

John Hickey who is charged with having murdered Ed Haley, alias "Blackey," at Stony Point on Wednesday, was held to answer before the Superior Court by Justice of the Peace A. J. Atchinson. A bail bond of $5,000 was fixed in the case, which the prisoner was unable to give and was remanded to jail.

P. J. Ward, one of the principal witnesses for the prosecution, was placed under bonds of $500 to appear before the Superior Court when the case is called for trial. In default of sureties for that amount he is languishing in the county jail. This order was made by the justice on the request of District Attorney Charles H. Pond, to insure the appearance of the witness when wanted. The district attorney stated he believed the witness was preparing to leave the country.

Two of the witnesses, Ward and P. J. McInchey, testified that they were so intoxicated on the night of the killing that they had no recollection of what transpired. The latter declared he had been drinking whiskey on the day of the tragedy for a sickness, and that at the time his tentmate was killed, he was sleeping in blissful ignorance of what had transpired near him. He declared he knew no more of the affair than "a babe unborn."

D. McDonald was the only one of the witnesses who could throw any light on the murder. From his testimony it seemed that Haley received his death wound while he was trying to hold Hickey on a bed and quiet him after Hickey had interfered in a friendly scuffle between Haley and Ward.

CURED CONSUMPTION.

Mrs. B. W. Evars, Clearwater, Kan., writes: "My husband lay sick for three months. The doctors said he had quick consumption. We procured a bottle of Ballard's Horehound Syrup, and it cured him. That was six years ago. Since then we have always kept a bottle in the house. We cannot do without it. For coughs and colds it has no equal." 25c, 50c, $1, at Simmons' drug store.

P. Berry, Rooms 21 and 22, Dougherty-Shea Building, corner of 5th and Montecito streets, Santa Rosa, Sonoma County, California, all the right, title, interest and estate of the said Paul Robin, deceased, at the time of his death and all the right, title and interest that the said estate has, by operation of law or otherwise, acquired other than or in addition to that of the said Paul Robin, deceased, at the time of his death, in and to all those certain lots, pieces or parcels of land situated, lying, and being in the said County of Sonoma, State of California, and bounded and described as follows, to-wit:

Known, designated and numbered upon the map of the City of Sonoma, as Lot Number 31, in said city, upon which is situated, the building known as the Eldorado Hotel, and the same property conveyed by Madama B. Attorney to the President of the Board of Trustees of Cumberland College, by deed dated January 7, 1888, and also the lot of land in the rear of the Eldorado Hotel aforesaid, which is bounded and described as follows:

Commencing at the North-West corner of the house on Lot Number 31, in said city, on Vallejo Street, and running South 61 1/2 varas; thence Westerly 26 1/2 varas with lands sold by Salvador Vallejo, to Juan Castaneda, by deed dated July 24th, 1888; thence North 61 1/2 varas to the place of beginning which said last described lot was included in said deed from William B. Atterbury. Being also the same property heretofore, to-wit: August 14, 1888, conveyed by John B. Smith and O. S. Smith, his wife, formerly O. S. Kenney to Victoria E. Robin and others.

Terms and Conditions of Sale:—Cash; ten percent of the purchase money to be paid to the undersigned on the day of sale; balance on confirmation of sale by said Superior Court. Deed at expense of purchaser.

FRANK L. BLACKBURN,
Administrator of the Estate of Paul Robin, deceased.

Nov. 11th, 1904.

For over a third of a century Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has sold largely other than any Blood Purifier. Bigger sales ever before not the Cures others you? rich and Stomach Tonic today than Is that true test? why not makes blood!

AN ILLUSTRATION OF NATURE'S METHOD of restoring waste of tissue and improving the blood and nervous force is used when you take an alternative extract of herbs and roots, without the use of alcohol, like Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This vegetable medicine coaxes the digestive functions and helps in the assimilation of food, or rather takes from the food just the nutriment the blood requires.

Along with its use one should take exercise in the outdoor air, get all one can of God's sunlight and air; a mild breathing exercise practiced each day. This "Medical Discovery" gives no false stimulation, because it does not contain alcohol or a narcotic. It helps digestion and the assimilation of such elements in the food as are required for the blood. Instead of a cod liver oil, against which the already sensitive stomach will declare open rebellion, this is a food and gives to the blood the food elements the tissues require. It maintains one's nutrition by enabling him to eat, retain, digest and assimilate nutritious food. It overcomes gastric irritability and symptoms of indigestion, and in this way, fever, night-sweats, headaches, etc., are done away with. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery purifies the blood and entirely eradicates the poisons that breed and feed disease. It thus cures scrofula, eczema, erysipelas, boils, pimples, and that mar and scar the skin. Pure blood is essential to good health. The weak, run-down, debilitated condition which so many people experience is commonly the effect of impure blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery not only cleanses the blood of impurities, but it increases the activity of the blood-making glands, and it enriches the body with an abundant supply of pure, rich blood.

No matter how powerful the intellect or the resources of intellectual power, it must be backed up by physical force. Every day the youth or man must manufacture a pint of rich, arterial blood, that is pure, stimulating to the brain, and that can rebuild the tissues that were destroyed in yesterday's work.

"I have been a sufferer from indigestion for some thirty years, at times," writes Mr. S. W. Mullenax, of Circleville, W. Va., "and have used medicine from several of our best physicians, which gave me only a false temporary relief. They said I could never be cured. Last winter I was stricken with the worst spell that I ever had. I suffered with such severe pains in the pit of my stomach that I could neither work nor sleep, and my weight went down from one hundred and sixty pounds in about two months time. I then concluded that I would try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. By the time the first bottle was gone, I felt some relief from my severe suffering so continued until I had used four bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and two vials of 'Pleasant Pellets.' I am truly thankful for the great benefit which I have received from your medicine, and can cordially recommend it to others."

Killed a Coyote

Dogs Chase Animal Into a House Where it is Finally Shot

On Monday afternoon Florindo Nicolini, the superintendent of the Chauvet winery at Glen Ellen killed a large coyote under the table in the dining room at his residence near the winery.

Nicolini's dogs had run the coyote to earth and it dashed through the open door into the house, followed by the dogs. Nicolini was attracted by the yelping of the dogs and the cries of the coyote, which mingled with the general racket in the room. He took his rifle and club and dispatched the pest of the sheepfolds and chicken roosts as it lay snarling at its canine trailers under the table.

The killing increases the winery man's bank account to the tune of five dollars, and in due time he will forward the skin and pelt to County Clerk Fred L. Wright accompanied by a bill for the county's coyote bounty of a fiver.

A GREAT SUCCESS.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Congregational church, Sonoma, are to be congratulated on the success of their entertainment and fair last Friday evening.

Union Hall was packed to the doors, the program was excellently rendered and all of the various booths were well patronized. A very neat sum was realized.

FAVORED BY BOTH PARTIES

Republicans and Democrats alike praise Foley's Honey and Tar for coughs, colds and all throat and lung diseases, as no other remedy can compare with it. It is safe and sure. F. I. Slater, merchant, 171 Main St., Gloucester, Mass. writes: "Foley's Honey and Tar cured me of a very bad cough which I had for three months though other remedies failed to benefit me. I can highly recommend it for coughs and colds." Sold by L. S. Simmons, druggist.

GRANTED A DIVORCE

Judge Seawell granted Mrs. Arletta Nickerson a divorce from Robert T. Nickerson in the Superior Court on Monday. The ground was failure to provide. Mrs. Nickerson and Mrs. Mary Connors were the witnesses called. The couple were married in St. Louis in 1889. John Tyler Campbell was the attorney for the plaintiff. Mrs. Nickerson formerly resided in Sonoma.

MANCHESTER MARTYRS

The 37th anniversary of the execution of Allen, Larkin and O'Brien was commemorated at the French Cottage, El Verano, by the guests, irrespective of nationality, the large dining hall being filled to its utmost capacity. Capt. Filgate called the assemblage to order, and reviewed the various events leading up to that memorable episode in Irish history. The chairman called on P. M. McGeechin of San Francisco to address the meeting. His remarks included the history of the Fenian movement from its inception to the present time, and his speech met with enthusiastic approval.

Supervisor Thomas F. Finn made an interesting address apropos to the occasion, and recited a patriotic poem.

P. J. Crowe sang "The Wearing of the Green" and for encore, "The Rising of the Moon." Albert Olsen sang "The Shamrock of Ireland."

Mr. J. Dutil, proprietor of the French Cottage, sang "La Marseillaise."

Mr. Dutil and daughter sang a French patriotic song and kindly responded to an encore.

Capt. Filgate recited "Fontenoy" and the entertainment closed, the audience rising and singing "God Save Ireland."

Delicious refreshments were served.

COUNTERFEITING THE GENUINE

Foley & Co., Chicago, originated Honey and Tar as a throat and lung remedy, and on account of the great merit and popularity of Foley's Honey and Tar many imitations are offered for the genuine. Ask for Foley's Honey and Tar and refuse any substitute offered as no other preparation will give the same satisfaction. It is mildly laxative. It contains no opiates and is safest for children and delicate persons. Sold by L. S. Simmons, druggist.

FILED A PETITION

Jessie M. Schumacher filed a petition today requesting that she be appointed guardian of her minor child, Arzola Lee Allenman. The child inherits a piece of real estate and some personal property from her late father, lately distributed by a decree of the court. The mother and her grandparents and stepfather of the minor child all reside at Schellville, in the southwestern portion of the county. Robert A. Pope is attorney for the petitioner.

Jessie M. Schumacher, former wife of deceased, is the administratrix of the estate, and the property, consisting of more than one hundred and sixty acres of land and a quantity of personal property, goes in equal proportions to her and an infant daughter of the first marriage, Arzola Lee Allenman.

Glen Ellen News Notes

A number of enthusiastic Republicans upon hearing favorable tidings following election day, conceived the idea of a good old ratification, and to carry out the affair, borrowed a cannon from Gen. Wagner. Mr. Farnocchio assumed all responsibility and acted as captain, and Angelo, his nephew, was appointed chief gunner. Now Angelo is fair of face, curly haired, and symmetrically formed young man of Sunny Italy. He has often been observed to shoot sly glances and love darts at the many good looking ladies of this place, and presuming that Republicanism was weak, and that the main strength of the G. O. P. consisted of shooting votes into the ballot box, he decided to try a little success and was much elated. He began the loading process in a reckless manner—a 5 gallon oil tin was used as a powder measure, while brick bats (of which there is an inexhaustible supply) were tamped into the muzzle with a baseball bat, and to complete the job a large dry goods box found in Poppe's back yard, was placed directly in front of the shooting iron, the fuse was ignited and results and developments were as follows:

The dry goods box mentioned has not been heard from and is probably going yet; a piece of cannon weighing 28 pounds scattered a Democratic caucus at Wm. Sobbe's place who were trying to figure out the vote in Missouri; and another piece weighing 20 pounds was found in the rear of Gaige's butcher shop after passing through half an ox hung there to cool; and still another piece weighing 16 pounds forced itself through a 2-inch wall in the postmaster's cow shed. These localities are situated a quarter of a mile distant and a hundred people were standing about and that none received serious injury is a miracle. It is the universal opinion here that if Angelo could control the heavy artillery about Port Arthur, the fall of that fortress would be a matter of only a few hours. Gen. Wagner would be a good deal in good part, the cannon will be replaced by a new one, and all is well that ends well.

A movement is being agitated in Glen Ellen to secure aid for a library court room and jail. There is some objection to having a library in the same building as the court room would occupy.

What is more needed than either a courtroom or a library, is a jail. Constable Allen, when he makes an arrest in the evening, has to guard his prisoner until next day in a room in the hotel, which, considering the desperate character of some of them, is not a very pleasant duty.

One of the curiosities of this neighborhood is a field of grain which was planted two weeks ago on Mr. John Smith's place. The stalks already show a growth of five inches and one can almost see them grow.

Leo Justi, one of the enterprising farmers of this district, is taking a course of studies in agriculture at Berkeley.

The Ladies improvement club have taken up some needed improvements in this locality and no doubt will carry them out.

Mrs. C. E. Martens new cottage on Tokey Ave. is nearly completed and will be occupied immediately. The grounds are prepared for a new brick building between the Cobb and Handman dwellings.

A grand ball will be given by the Woman's Improvement club Friday Dec. 16th.

NOT A SICK DAY SINCE.
"I was taken severely sick with kidney trouble. I tried all sorts of medicines, none of which relieved me. One day I saw an ad. of your Electric Bitters and determined to try that. After taking a few doses I felt relieved, and soon thereafter was entirely cured, and have not seen a sick day since. Neighbors of mine have been cured of Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Liver and Kidney troubles and General Debility." This is what B. F. Bass of Fremont N. C. writes. Only 50 cents, at Shoults' drug store.

John Wagon, who has been working in S. F. for the past ten months, has returned to Sonoma to remain permanently.

THROWN FROM HIS BUGGY

T. S. Glaister met with a runaway accident last Saturday on the Napa road. The accident was caused by an automobile at which Mr. Glaister's horse took fright. The old gentleman was accompanied at the time by his daughter, Mrs. Otto Wagner who was also thrown from the buggy and sustained a broken arm and many cuts and bruises.

Mr. Glaister has suffered internal injuries as a result of the accident, and at present writing he is not making favorable progress.

Some time ago Mr. Glaister was in another accident and had two ribs broken, and had never fully recovered from the effects of the shock.

LATER.
Word reached here yesterday afternoon that Mr. Glaister had passed away from the result of his injuries. Mr. Glaister was a careful hardworking man of excellent character, a good, useful and charitable citizen, one whom any community values. The deceased gentleman was 81 years of age, and came to Sonoma Valley in the seventies.

An inquest will be held to-morrow afternoon at 2:30. The funeral will take place on Sunday.

CONSTIPATION.
Health is almost impossible, if constipation be present. Many serious cases of liver and kidney complaint have sprung from neglected constipation. Such a deplorable condition is unnecessary. There is a cure for it. Herbine will speedily remedy matters. C. A. Lindsay, P. M., Bronson, Fla., writes, Feb. 12, 1902: "Having tried Herbine, I find it a fine medicine for constipation. 50c, at Simmons' drug store."

The ghting is still going on in the far east, and as usual, the Japs are still gaining a little by little.

NEURALGIA PAINS.
Rheumatism, lumbago and sciatic pains yield to the penetrating influence of Ballard's Snow Liniment. It penetrates to the nerves and bone and being absorbed into the blood, its healing properties are conveyed to every part of the body, and effect some wonderful cures. 25c, 50c, $1, at Simmons' drug store.

Misa Ella Monohan of Glen Ellen, who has been the guest of the Misses Stanley, at their home on upper Fourth street, has returned to her home after a delightful visit. Miss Monohan is one of the popular girls of Glen Ellen.—Republican.

BEST LINIMENT ON EARTH.
Henry D. Baldwin, Supt. City Water Works, Shullsburg, Wis., writes: "I have tried many kinds of liniment, but I have never received much benefit until I used Ballard's Snow Liniment for rheumatism and pains. I think it the best liniment on earth." 25c, 50c, $1, at Simmons' drug store.

Don't fail to hear Virgil Alonzo Pinkley in Union Hall to-night.

DOESN'T RESPECT OLD AGE.
It's shameful when youth fails to show proper respect for old age, but just the contrary in the case of Dr. King's New Life Pills. They cut off maladies no matter how severe and irrespective of old age. Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Fever, Constipation, all yield to this perfect pill. 25c, at Shoults' drug store.

Mr. Frido Clewe is spending few days at his home here.

DISASTROUS WRECKS.
Carelessness is responsible for many a railway wreck and the same causes are making human wrecks of sufferers from Throat and Lung troubles. But since the advent of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, even the worst cases can be cured, and hopeless resignation is no longer necessary. Mrs. Lois Cragg of Dorchester, Mass., is one of many whose life was saved by Dr. King's New Discovery. This great remedy is guaranteed for all Throat and Lung diseases by Shoults, druggist. Price 50c and $1. Trial bottles free.

A marriage license was issued to L. M. Martin and Edith V. Peterson of Guerneville.

A CARD.
This is to certify that all druggists are authorized to refund your money if Foley's Honey and Tar fails to cure your cough or cold. It stops the cough and heals the lungs. Prevents pneumonia and will cure incipient consumption. Contains no opiates and is safest for children. Ask for Foley's Honey and Tar and insist upon having it. Stops the cough and heals the lungs. Sold at L. S. Simmons' drug store.

Tears and Fears

Go together with many women who are approaching the first experience of maternity. The husband finds it hard perhaps to understand the changing moods of his wife. Indeed she cannot understand herself. She only knows that she is nervous, restless and anxious. A great change has come over her which she cannot understand or explain.

Women do not always reflect that at this crisis they are living for two instead of one; that they need health for two and strength for two. The need for increased health and strength by the prospective mother is perfectly met and satisfied by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It tranquilizes the nerves, promotes the appetite and gives refreshing sleep. It makes the baby's advent practically painless, and gives the mother strength to give her child.

"I have before written you of the great benefit both myself and family have received from your most excellent medicine," says Mrs. P. S. Peterson, of Welome, Wis. "I have since tested its wonderful powers in the case of the coming of my fifth child. Took two bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and two of 'Golden Medical Discovery' the first two months and three of 'Favorite Prescription' the last two months. It saved me so much terrible suffering that I consider it a heavenly blessing."

Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong and sick women well. Accept no substitute for the medicine which works wonders for weak women.

The Salting of the Tio Juan

By WOLCOTT LE CLEAR BEARD

CHAPTER II.
IN the excitement of the affair at the hotel, the invitation that he was on his way to accept had entirely slipped Joyce's mind. Now he recollected it with impatience. He was too anxious about himself to relish the idea of taking tea with an unknown old woman. Still, at the sight of the ill-dressed figure smiling at him most bashfully, in the doorway, Joyce smiled back again and pulled off his cap.

"She's taken a shine to you somehow or another," said Tom in a whisper. "Never knew her to do that with no one before, but it's mighty queer for you to be so taken up with her. You'll be in her room here, you bet, her nowhere else."

There was an awkward moment as the three of them entered the little room which seemed to be at once kitchen and living and dining room, and into which the front door opened. Old Mrs. Elkins stood smiling at her visitor and gazing at him intently, yet with an air of feeble deprecation that was quite new to her. At least Tom never before had seen this manner in his imperious little aunt. No one knew exactly what to say, and there was a pause for a moment, which was broken by Joyce.

"It was awfully good of you to ask me up here in this way," said he. "One doesn't look for that kind of thing from strangers anywhere, far less in a place like this. Your nephew gave me no time to change my clothes, so I hope you'll pardon me. Won't you?" Joyce was talking simply in order to relieve the awkwardness of the situation, but Old Mrs. Elkins, entirely unmindful of the last part of his speech, she stood the last part of his speech. She knew that the clothes he was wearing had exposed him to ridicule and thought that he had become sensitive about them. She glanced at the golf stockings and then defiantly at her nephew before she spoke.

"I think them mighty pretty," said she. Tom grinned and was rewarded with a look of severe reproof from his aunt. "Tawm, theah, is a good boy," she went on apologetically, "but there's a lot of things that he ought to know 'bout that he don't. Mannahs is one." Tom, snubbed into silence for the time being, retired, while Old Mrs. Elkins bustled nervously about the room, making unnecessary changes in its meager arrangements.

Whenever she thought she was unobserved Joyce could see that his hostess was looking at him intently. Sometimes she would look at him and then discover that she had been discovered. Then she would throw into a state of such pitiable confusion that after one or two occasions of the kind Joyce refrained from looking at her. But he knew that her eyes were constantly upon him, and the knowledge made him uncomfortable. He tried to draw her into conversation, at first with indifferent success, but after awhile she began asking questions. Most searching questions they were. Joyce astonished himself by the readiness with which he answered them.

Ordinarily Joyce objected strongly to the examinations through which every chance acquaintance since he had come west had tried to put him. The questions of Old Mrs. Elkins, however, did not offend him in the least. Perhaps the apologetic manner in which they were made was accountable for this singular fact. Probably their being so, evidently prompted by a real interest instead of vulgar curiosity, had still more to do with it. At all events, he answered her as he would have answered an elderly relative, told her all about himself and his home and his reasons for leaving it. He had a little money, it seemed, and would have more. In the meantime he had come west to see what there was in the country, as he expressed it, and to make money, if he could, in some one of the many profitable enterprises that were, as he thought, constantly offering themselves.

"I don't know what theah is roun' theah," said Old Mrs. Elkins thoughtfully as Joyce told her this. "Gamblin' needs experience, even if you run a squallah game, an' theah's too many saloons theah now. I'd be a business too rough for you anyhow. Theah's nothin' lef' but minin', as I like to see. We kin talk that oveh. Suppah's ready now. Will you come?"

Tom, who was lounging on the veranda, came in at his aunt's. As they seated themselves Joyce hastened to assure his hostess that he had no thought of pursuing a profession either saloon keeping or gambling. Mining he had not only thought of going into, but had actually gone. Only the day before, the day of his coming to Boot Leg, he had bought a mine and intended working it.

"Now, that theah's too bad!" cried Old Mrs. Elkins in unexpected dismay, laying down her knife and fork.

Tom swore a little in an undertone and then asked: "What one of them fellers was it that you bought from? I thought mos' all of them what had holes ter sell was in that there crowd we saw down ter the hotel awhile back. You sure wasn't so friendly with any of them that they could work you like thes?"

"The man that sold it to me was in that crowd," admitted Joyce. "The crowd wasn't uncivil then, though. That all came afterward. He came to me last night and told me about this mine he had to sell; said it was a good mine and that he wouldn't part with it except that he was too ill to work it himself and wanted to get it off his hands as quickly as he could and then go back where he came from; said the climate here didn't agree with him."

"Don't know where 'twas he come from, but I know mighty well where he'll go ter," interrupted Tom, "an' the climate won't suit him neither. Didn't you see he was lyn? Men don't sell payin' mines like that."

"That's what I thought at first, but he took me down to this mine of his (it was bright moonlight, and he'd brought a lantern besides), and he washed out a panful and showed me the results. Then he told me to dig out some and wash it, and I did. The pans showed up handsomely, very. I don't see but what I've got a pretty good thing."

Joyce looked at his two auditors with a mild triumph, but to his surprise they both seemed to regard his purchase in the light of a joke.

"What one of them fellers was it that you bought from?" asked Tom. "I don't remember the man's name. It's on the papers, and the name of the mine is on the papers too. The man that sold it to me said that it meant Uncle John in English. Oh, yes. The man's name is Riley. I remember now."

"Tio Juan, is it? I don't seem ter remember no such mine. What Riley was it? There's two of 'em in town. One of 'em is Irish, an' the other has 'bout half his face 'twixt his nose an' his mouth, an' he talks kinder funny. Says 'nowt' when he means 'nothin'."

"That's the one," said Joyce, looking around him somewhat uneasily. "What's the matter with him? Isn't the mine all right?"

"Lippy Riley," said Tom, not answering Joyce's question, but looking, as he spoke, at his aunt. She nodded, her face full of concern.

"Isn't the mine all right?" asked Joyce again, his anxiety growing. "The ground that I dug and that I washed the gold out of hadn't ever been touched. I can swear to that."

"No; it hadn't never been touched. Prob'ly not to be dug up, that is—but it's been touched jus' the same if Lippy Riley sold it. I see him myself loadin' up shotgun cartridges with gol' dust more'n two or three days ago; had more'n a hundred of 'em, but he always keeps a lot on hand, so's it ain't no way likely that he used up all of 'em on that there claim of yours. Is this yer hole in the ground jus' down here a ways by the river, so's you have ter go by the hotel ter get ter it from here?"

"Yes," answered Joyce. "But what do you mean about the cartridges? I don't understand."

"He put this heah gol' dust into a gun an' then shot it into the ground," said Tom. "You could dig it out, an' the ground itself wouldn't look as though no man had evah been theah before." Old Mrs. Elkins explained pitifully. "He mus' give the money back. You see him, Tawm, will you?"

"Sure I'll see him," assented Tom readily. "Don't see what good that's a-goin' ter be ter Reb, though, 'thout it's the satisfaction."

"I don't want you to shoot the man, not until affah we get this money back anyhow," said Old Mrs. Elkins sharply. "D'you think every time I tell you to see a man I want you to shoot him? Make him give the money back. That's what he mus' do."

"All right," said Tom. "Don't see how you a-goin' ter work it, though."

Old Mrs. Elkins leaned over the table and began talking in a low tone to her nephew. There was no intention of keeping the conversation from Joyce's ears, yet he heard nothing. What they had told him of this mine was a great blow. For some reason he could not help believing these people. He vainly tried to think that they were acting from some ulterior motive. As to their getting his money back from Riley, he had no confidence in that. The sooner he made his mind up to the loss the better. In public he would try to maintain the appearance of being a good loser, but in the meantime he was distinctly blue, the more so because these fits of despondency were almost unknown to him. He was aroused from his study by Tom's hand on his shoulder.

"I got ter go down now an' get ter work," said he. "Maybe you better walk along with me, see'n how you ain't got no gun. I'll have ter go right by that there hotel. There'll be two of us then, an' I reckon there won't be no trouble."

Joyce rose and started to bid his hostess good night. Tom threw on his hat and stood up out of the door. Joyce was following him, but Old Mrs. Elkins seemed very reluctant to let him go. She retained his hand as he offered it, so that he could not draw it away without using a degree of force.

"Maybe I seem kinder—kinder famillous like in this heah way I been a-talkin' to you," said she apologetically. "But you won't min', will you? You see, I'm an' of woman, an' no one don't min' what I do." Joyce began eagerly to disclaim any idea of taking offense, but she interrupted him.

"We'll get that theah money back for you, Tawm an' I will. You'll agree to let Tawm try, won't you? You see," she went on after hesitating for a moment, "I had a boy once. He'd a' been ter yer age now if he'd lived. I think he'd a' looked somethin' like you. I got his picture theah. Won't you maybe—wouldn't you like to see it?"

Joyce smiled and nodded. The old woman beamed on him for an instant, then turned to a table that stood near, and from between the leaves of a gaudily bound book that lay upon it she produced a tawny, yellowed, and faded photograph. It was a very old tawny. The pink paper that it was in had faded until it was nearly white, and on the edges it was worn through. She carefully folded back the cover and then gazed for a moment at the picture before handing it to Joyce.

"It stahs has got yer look in it. It's cuttainly has," said she.

Joyce examined the picture carefully. In spite of the artificial complexion by means of which the photographer had endeavored to enhance its beauty, it did cruel violence to Joyce's vanity. His first feeling was one of profound disgust that he could be thought by any stretch of the imagination to resemble the face that stared at him from that picture.

"Don't you think it looks like you? Can't you see how it does," asked Old Mrs. Elkins wistfully, "roun' the eyes, theah, an' the chin?" Joyce glanced at the withered face that was looking into his, eagerly awaiting his reply, and then fled nobly.

"Yes, there is a resemblance," said he, "a very strong resemblance—striking." The old woman flushed with pleasure as he laid the picture carefully in her work hardened palm. She turned to replace it in the book, and as she did so Tom reappeared in the doorway.

"Look a-yere," he cried good naturedly. "If yer goin' along with me you'll have ter git a wiggle on. I got ter get ter work."

"He's a-goin', Tawm. He's a-goin' to stah right now. Didn't you say you had no gun?" she asked, addressing Joyce.

"No; I haven't," he replied. "I don't need one now, though. If I'm going down with Tom, I'll get one in the way."

"You mus' never know when yer a-goin' to need one an' when yer not," said his hostess reprovingly. "Don't nevah talk that way. That kindah talk has seen the en' of some mighty good men. Take this." As she spoke she drew from the bosom of her gown a double barreled Derringer and held it toward him. "You couldn't have nothin' bettah foh shawt range," she went on, smiling the reason for Joyce's hesitation in taking the proffered weapon.

"This one ain't neah so hand to cock as the run of them Derringers. Put it in the outside pocket of that theah jacket an' keep yer han' in theah too. Then, if you have to shoot, git as close as you kin an' turn it loose right through the pocket, an' do it quick."

"But I don't want to take your pistol," Joyce expostulated. "You'd be without any then, and really I haven't any particular use for it now."

"Don't you s'pose I got another?" asked Old Mrs. Elkins impatiently. "Take it."

"Why don't you take it like she tells you ter?" said Tom, amazed that any one should thus trifle with the mandates of his aunt. "Come along, I got ter hurry. Good night." He waved his hand to the little woman standing in the doorway and then hastened off. Joyce put the Derringer in his pocket and followed.

"Good night," Old Mrs. Elkins called after them. "Don't take yer han' outah yer pocket at all. Then you can't go wrong. Remember that."

"She's dead right," Tom agreed, "but that she always is. You won't need ter do no shootin' tonight, though, mos' likely, not 'thout you run yerself right 'raile." "I don't reckon I'll go to work tonight. I'll be fresher in the mornin' then."

"Rather an odd time to go to work anyhow, isn't it?" asked Joyce.

"It's the regular time in my business. There ain't nothin' done in the daytime. I run the Easy Go. Didn't you know that? It's a square game. Generally I deal one of the tables myself, but I'll put somebody else on this ter-morrow. I start in at work on that theah mine of yours. You're partners in that mine, you an' me. Don't forget that, an' be careful you don't queer no other bluff I chuck. I'll take some play to put Lippy Riley ter the wad he got outah you. You go an' turn in now. There ain't no need fer you ter be roun' that there hole in the ground what you call the Tio Juan, an' yer better away, but if you meander down there sometimes in the course of the forenoon it won't do no harm."

TOO RAPID EATING.

It is One of the Most Fruitful Causes of Ill Health.

One of the most fruitful causes of ill health and bad complexion is the habit of rapid eating. It is growing more and more prevalent in this country. We really haven't time to eat properly, and we have very little time to sleep, yet we hope to retain youth and beauty.

A woman may work ever so hard and be under a great tension while working, but if she will take time enough to eat (a half hour at the least, with a half hour rest at noon), and will sleep seven or eight hours of the twenty-four she will greatly increase her usefulness.

With the habit of rapid eating comes an increase in the amount of liquids taken during the meals. Food properly masticated can be easily swallowed, but if it is chewed it must be washed down with liquid. This, of course, lessens the assimilating power of the gastric juices and interferes greatly with the process of digestion.

Those who have tried thorough mastication of their food with no liquid, unless at the end or a half hour after the meal, have learned that the food tastes better, the meal is more satisfactory and the appetite is appeased with less food, the digestion is aided, leaving one much more comfortable than the hasty meal. A few days' trial will convince the most skeptical, for the stomach responds promptly to decent treatment. It expects it. It deserves it.

One of the greatest mistakes of the age is rapid eating, and one of the greatest curses is the nervous dyspepsia caused by it.

Have You Got Them?
Do you feel anxious and preoccupied when the gas man goes by?
Do you sleep badly?
Do you go to bed hungry?
Does your heart palpitate when you see a steak?

Is there an all gone feeling in your pocket?
Do you have nightmares?
Do you do mental arithmetic every time you contemplate the purchase of "coffee and?"

Have you a hunted look?
Do you walk down dark alleys when you go downtown?
Beware! Those are the symptoms. You're busted.—San Francisco Bulletin.

OLIVER CROMWELL.

The Greatest Error of His Career Was Charles's Execution.

The greatest error of Cromwell's life was the execution of the king. Not that in this he showed himself a man of blood. There was in him not a particle of the terrorist or of the passion for regicide which slew the helpless king of France. He had been provoked no doubt by Charles' double dealing, but he did not hate him; on the contrary, he was inclined to him and had wished to come to terms with him. Himself brimming with family affection, he had been touched by the sight of Charles with his children. He was impelled to the fatal act by what seemed to him necessity and by the uncontrollable wrath of the army against the king, whose perfidious machinations, while he was treating with the parliament for a settlement, had kindled the second civil war, with the Scotch invasion, and brought them and their cause once more into the extremity of peril. It was at the prayer meeting of the soldiers at Windsor, before they marched against Hamilton, that the king's doom was really pronounced. The secret treaty with the Scotch for the invasion of England brought Charles to the block, and his offense surely was capital, though its punishment was most ill advised. The death of the monarch set the king free and absolved the monarchy; it put in place of the monarch the regicides and a great part of the nation, and flung, far from being sickened, as Carlyle says it was, flourished on the martyrdom and has continued to flourish on it ever since. The success of Ikon Baslike was the proof.—Goldwin Smith in Atlantic.

WAIFS IN AUSTRALIA.

The State Finds Them Good Homes and Has No Orphanage.

Australia is a continent without an orphanage, a country without an orphan. Each waif is taken to a receiving house where it is cared for till a country home is found. The local volunteer societies canvass their neighborhoods and send to the children's committee of the destitute board the names of any families they have found where children may be placed. The children's committee selects the home which it judges is best adapted to the development of the child in question.

No child is placed in a family so poor that the child might suffer. The foster parent receives a sum averaging $1.25 per week for the care of the child and for proper clothing. When of school age the child must be sent to school. The local volunteer committee looks after its care and culture, and zealous neighbors often assist in watching the growth and education of these happy children.

When the child is fourteen years old he begins to work. His earnings are placed in the Postal Savings bank, and at the age of seventeen or eighteen he goes out into the world an independent man. The state, at an expense of less than $70 a year, has raised a man or woman to contribute to its wealth and prevented the manufacture of a criminal and the expense of courts, prisons and reformatories.

OLD TIME PROBLEMS.

Schoolbook Posers for the Man Who Knows It All.

Schoolboys and girls of today who think they are oppressed by problems requiring the use of both English and metric units of weight and measure would be appalled by an examination of some of the text books their grandmothers studied. The author of "Old Time Schools" quotes many questions which are in a language unintelligible today.

"How much will 10 serons of cochlinal come to," asks an arithmetic published a century ago in Northampton, Mass., "weighing neat 724 oaks, 73 rotolas, at 80 plasters per oak?"

"How much will 150 bazar maunds, 31 seer and 8 chittacks of sugar come to at 6 rupees per maund?"

Any one who had finished a course in that book was evidently equipped to go as supercargo in an old fashioned merchantman. But who of today would know for what he was equipped when he had struggled with the next one?

"Deduct the tare and the tret and divide the suttie by 103, and the quotient will be the cloff, which subtract from the suttie, and the remainder will be the neat."

It becomes scarcely more intelligible when explained by definition: "Tare is an allowance made the purchaser for box, bag or barrel. Tret is an allowance of four pounds in each hundred and four for waste, dust and so forth. Cloff is an allowance of two pounds upon every three hundredweight. Suttie is what is left when a part of the allowance is deducted. Neat remains when all is deducted."

When trouble goes hunting him a man may dodge it, but when a man goes hunting trouble it hasn't one chance in a thousand of escaping him.
